The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-9, 11-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Herrell et al.

Herrell teaches an integrated circuit configuration that includes feed back circuitry to control mid-frequency components of current demand of the integrated circuit chip and thereby regulate the power supply voltage to within design tolerances of the integrated circuit chip. In some configurations, the IC chip includes current dump circuitry defining a controlled impedance path between first and second power supply terminals of the chip. In other configurations, the feedback circuit is coupled to on-chip clock circuits to actuate variations in a clock signal supplied to the IC chip and thereby regulate the power supply voltage.

Claim 10 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: Claim 10 recites the phase shifting of current in power consumption circuitry in response to sensed overshoot or undershoot conditions. This limitation is not taught or fairly suggested by the prior art of record at the time of this office action.
